BOY STRICKEN BLIND IN SLEEP.

Nothing to sleep recently with sight apparently normal, Hobart Bray awoke next morning to find himself totally blind. Bray, who is sixteen years old and lives at No. 518 Baltic Avenue, was taken to the Will's Eye Hospital, Philadelphia.

Bray, a poor boy with ambitions, owes his misfortune perhaps to hard study. After putting in six hours daily at the public schools he has been assisting to support a large family by working as a telegraph messenger. When his work was over, usually about 11 o'clock at night, he prepared his lessons for the next day. He is considered one of the best pupils in his class.

Because of the family's poverty he has had to study by candle light at home. But his eyes never previously troubled him. He suffered from a severe headache, but finally went to sleep.

When he awoke about 6 o'clock to put in a couple of hours' work as a messenger before school time he was unable to see. The boy thought the failure of vision only temporary, but when home remedies failed to relieve him a physician was called. On his advice Hobart was taken to the hospital.

Neighbours made up a purse to assist in defraying the expense and his comrades with the telegraph company also "chipped in." The boy takes his affliction bravely and thinks only of the trouble he may be to his family.—China Press.

During the dusk with swords at a recent performance of "Erud Maleis" at the Alhambra Theatre, Miss Alexandra Carlisle, accidentally struck Mr. Henry Ainley in the hand with a sword. When she discovered what had happened she drew a ruffian from her sleeve and bound Mr. Ainley's arm tightly so as to reduce the bleeding. Mr. Ainley was able to go through his performance, and the wound was afterwards treated by a surgeon.

IF BRITAIN WENT TO WAR.

What Would Happen in the City?

The Round Table, that admirable arena
for the discussion of the serious problems of the Empire, published last month a most luminous and interesting article on the credit system of the world, and how it would be affected by war. The article, entitled "Lombard Street and War," is anonymous, but it has been described by the Times as "one of the most remarkable articles on what we may call the natural history of the City" that has been published for some time. The writer displays an amount of knowledge of the working of the London Money Market and a degree of insight into the forces which govern it which is unusual and refreshing.
That it is written "with a purpose" makes its scientific breadth all the more surprising.

LONDON AS THE NERVE CENTRE OF
THE WORLD.

The writer says:—
"An infinite number of strands binds all the great nations to one another, and, like the nerves of the human body, these strands radiate from the great nerve centres of credit."

The art of banking is to speculate, with success on the chances that only a small proportion of creditors will ask for their money in gold at the same moment. But they may all demand it.

Gold must be always available somewhere. And it is always available, but only from one place in the world. "London alone among the great financial centres, has undertaken the task of meeting every legitimate demand in gold at all times and to any amount. No other banking nation has ventured to face the risk of meeting
not only the demands of its own depositors, but of the world itself. If Germany, for example, were to demand a loan, she gets it from London; if New York wants gold, she gets it from London; if the Argentine or Egypt or India have had good harvests
and want gold, they get it from London."

She undertakes to supply on demand not only the countless depositors in her own bank, but the world at large. Anybody in the world who keeps money in London, or can raise a credit or get an advance in London can get gold from the Bank of England.

LONDON'S GOLD RESERVE.

The Bank of France holds to the amount of $128,000,000; the Bank of Russia, $125,000,000; the Reichsbank, $55,000,000; while the bank of England,
with world-wide liabilities, has only $23,000,000 lying in bullion or coin in the vaults of the Bank of England, together with the stock of metal held by other banks, in all, perhaps $70,000,000. It is estimated that this sum is equal to, not much more than six per cent. of the total deposits of the banks of the United Kingdom.

While the stock scattered about among the different banks is a valuable stand-by, the final reserve is the reserve of the Bank of England. That is the reserve which all the banks in the United Kingdom fall back on. In 1907 America drew nearly $15,000,000 in two months from London.

The Bank of England's reserve fell over $5,000,000 in two weeks. There is no other nation which has been able to undertake these tremendous responsibilities.

Since 1895 the world's gold has increased by $1,000,000,000. A great portion of this huge sum has passed through London, because London is a free market. Only $20,000,000 has stayed there.

It was broken out.

What, then, is likely to happen on the outbreak of such a war? Suppose, for instance, Germany declared war against Britain.

A crisis in the Money Market would be an instantly precipitated. Everybody would be tempted to place their money in a position to meet their engagements. Money would dry up, and the Bank would be unable to supply the demand.

London might never regain her place.
Gold would flow in again, no doubt,
to pay for the interest on our present investments, which amounts to something like $180,000,000 per annum on a capital invested of $3,300,000,000 sterling.
The most dangerous period, therefore,
will be the few days or weeks after the declaration of war, if it is a free gold market which is inevitable, the few days before that declaration, when our enemies might attempt to withdraw as much money as possible.

But if we were defeated our position as the world's financial centre might be lost
for ever.

The moral of this is, according to the writer, that "The British fleet is the best protector of London's gold reserve." To vary the phrase, Lombard Street floats in the British Navy, and the nerve centre of the world depends for its safety upon the maintenance of the standard of two keels
to one.

London finances Germany by means of acceptances to the extent probably of about $70,000,000 sterling at any one time. This means that accepting houses in London will have made themselves responsible during the two or three months after the outbreak of war for the payment, mainly to the Joint Stock Banks, of $70,000,000,
against bills drawn on German accounts,
which these banks and others will have bought in the discount market. But the accepting houses would only be in a position to pay the whole of this large sum if they receive, as they would in the ordinary course of affairs, the same amount from their German clients, to finance whose business the bills were drawn. It is quite probable that these clients would not or could not pay. It is probable that they would not, the discount market would be so hopelessly disorganised that a "moratorium" would have to be declared.

QUEEN-CUTTING CAMPAIGN.

Several of the men who took part in the queen-cutting campaign on the boundary of the West Hongkong district on Saturday appeared at the Mixed Court yesterday (says the "N. C. Daily News") before Magistrate Nich and Mr. Handley Derry (British Assessor).

The first case called on was that of Tsing Yih-sung, a police constable of Paochan, who was charged with being concerned with others not yet in custody in assaulting the complainant by forcibly cutting off his queue.

Mr. C. G. Kirk prosecuted and Mr. J. C. E. Douglas appeared for the defendant.

Mr. Douglas said he would ask for a remand. He had not had time to see the accused, and he wished to get the man's own story through his interpreter. He understood that three men were concerned in the charge and he wanted to have more particulars.

Mr. Kirk said that he understood that Mr. Douglas was already in possession of the charge.

Mr. Handley Derry pointed out that there were three separate charges.

C.C. 424 gave evidence of arresting the accused at the corner of Alabaster and Thibet Roads on Saturday at 12.45.

The Court decided to hear the case on Wednesday at 11 o'clock.

Mr. Douglas applied for bail, saying that the accused was in the Chapel Police force and could be produced. He understood that the man was somewhat bruised and sore.

Mr. Kirk produced a doctor's certificate and said accused complained of bruises and had been sent to the hospital. He was instructed to object to bail.

The Court granted bail of £200.

Tsai Tzu-sun was charged with unlawfully and maliciously cutting off queues on the North Street Road at 7.30 on Saturday.

P.C. Hall stated that several people complained to him of having had their queues cut off, and he went with them and saw accused in the act of cutting off a queue. There were eight altogether, but he only saw this man actually cutting the queue.

Mr. Handley Derry—Did not the man struggle?

Witness—I did not see. This complainant tried to get away.

Mr. Handley Derry—Did they all stand more or less motionless while the queues were being cut?

Witness—They were taken off before the men knew where they were. Witness could not get the scissors used owing to the crowd.

Mr. Handley Derry—Did the crowd assist the accused?

Witness—They all seemed confused. They did not know where they were.

Evidence of the cutting was given by three native witnesses, one of whom said that two men got hold of him while a third cut off his queue.

Accused denied the offence. He said that it was done by somebody else. He was sentenced to three weeks' imprisonment, and the Magistrate informed him that he had been dealt with lightly on account of his youth. The third case was against a clerk of Paochan, who admitted cutting off a man's queue on the Wuchow Road on Saturday afternoon, and attempting to cut others. He was sentenced to three weeks' imprisonment.

A coolie charged with a similar offence at the corner of Alabaster and Thibet Roads was remanded for the attendance of the complainant. He said he had been arrested by mistake.

Another man charged with attempting to cut a queue on North Chokling Road was sent to prison for seven days. It was stated that he tried to pull the complainant over the settlement boundary in order to cut off his queue.

EUROPEAN WOMAN ARRESTED IN SINGAPORE.

A Rangoon Complaint.

In connection with the arrest of Mrs. Thorpe, says the "Straits Times," we take the following from Rangoon Gazette:

A report has been made to the commissioner of police by Mr. Teepik, manager of the Strand Hotel, that a woman, calling herself Mrs. Thorpe, engaged rooms at the hotel on February 26 and remained until March 27. She was accompanied by a man who registered himself as Carson Sharpe. Mrs. Thorpe paid her bill for February, but owing to trouble with the servants asked to leave the hotel with her companion on March 27, which she did without settling her bill which amounted to over Rs. 900. Mr. Sharpe's bill for the same period amounted to about Rs. 400. Soon after they had left the hotel, two letters were received from Messrs. Giles and Colman, barristers-at-law, asking that Mrs. Thorpe and Mr. Sharpe's bills be sent the next day.

March 28, and two days later reminders were sent, but still no remittance was received. Complainant had a personal interview with Mr. Giles who stated he would communicate with the parties and ask them to settle their bills with the hotel. At that time the complainant stated he had information that both the man and the woman were at the Minto Mansions Hotel. Nothing further was heard of the parties until he received word that they had quietly left Rangoon for Singapore on April 4. Since then he has learned that they have an unsettled account with Mr. P. Kiler amounting to two or three hundred rupees. He therefore suspected their bona fides and charged them with cheating.

In addition to the above complaint, Bishop Cardot has informed the commissioner of police that Mrs. Thorpe came to him on March 12 and asked for a loan saying she wished to go to Moulmein but had no money for her ticket, as the draft which she had just received from her brother or some other person for over Rs. 1,000 had unfortunately been made out in a faulty manner, the amount being given in figures but not in words. She was therefore unable to cash it. He lent her Rs. 100 which she promised to return as soon as a correct draft could be received as she was sending the faulty one back for correction. The Rs. 100 had never been returned. He had since learned that she had obtained various sums of money from other persons in a similar manner and that she had left for Penang and Singapore on Thursday, April 4.

Father St. Guily, pastor of the Cantonment Roman Catholic Church, is also alleged to have been victimised. He is alleged to have lent Rs. 100 to a woman in a similar manner and the Mother Superior of the Convent of the Good Shepherd on Commissioner Road is also said to have lent Rs. 300. None of these amounts have been paid.

ANGLO-GERMAN RELATIONS.GERMANY'S AMBASSADOR IN LONDON.

(Reuter's Service to the China Mail.)
LONDON, May 6.
A report that Baron M. von Bieberstein, the German Ambassador at Constantinople, will shortly replace Count Metternich in London is widely credited in Berlin. Baron von Bieberstein left Constantinople on Saturday. It is pointed out that he is mainly responsible for Germany's unique influence in Turkey, and it is agreed that the appointment, if confirmed, will be of the greatest importance, and will possibly mark a new epoch in Anglo-German relations.
The Neueste Nachrichten newspaper says that Baron von Bieberstein's removal from Constantinople at such a critical period shows how great is the importance at present attached to Germany's representation in London. Both nations can now look forward to further Anglo-German negotiations with greater confidence.

THE TAFT-ROOSEVELT
CORRESPONDENCE.MR. ASQUITH'S VIGOROUS EXPLANATION.

(Reuter's Service to the China Mail.)
LONDON, May 6.
Mr. Asquith, the Prime Minister, replying in the House of Commons to numerous questions, vigorously repelled the suggestion that Mr. Bryce, the British Ambassador at Washington, had committed himself to American Canadian Reciprocity. Obviously, he knew nothing of the private correspondence of President Taft and Mr. Roosevelt, and he (Mr. Bryce) had nothing to do with influencing the views or policy of the Laurier Cabinet, but had, in pursuance of his plain duty, communicated from time to time with Canadian Ministers when they were in conference at Washington. He gave advice and assistance when asked, but had never interfered in the Conference, and had performed his duties in such a way that had inspired the confidence of Canada in the British Ambassador at Washington.

FURTHER DETAILS.

LATER.
Prior to the adjournment of the House of Commons, Mr. Croft raised the question of Reciprocity between America and Canada and criticised the attitude of Mr. Bryce whom, he said, the Unionists attacked as they attacked the Government for neglecting to watch Imperial interests. It was essential, he thought, after the Canadian verdict that Mr. Bryce should be promoted to another sphere.

Sir Edward Grey said he was most concerned to repudiate the very unfair attacks being made upon Mr. Bryce, and the Government were able and ready to defend itself in the country. Mr. Bryce had rendered great Imperial service, and he (Sir Edward Grey) was convinced that Canada appreciated the value of Mr. Bryce's support of Canadian interests.

THE SYRIA COLLISION.

Fine Behaviour of Passengers
and Crew.

The P. and O. outward intermediate steamer Syria, which is expected to arrive in Hongkong to-morrow, was recently will be remembered, in collision in the Mediterranean Sea with the French steamer Circe. Inquiries made on board at Colombo show that a thick fog hung over the sea when, about 6 o'clock in the evening, the accident occurred. The captain of the Syria had realised that a collision was about to occur, and was going astern at the time. But for this, remarked an officer, there would have been an entirely different story to tell. The impact resulted in the Syria getting fourteen of her steel plates on extreme starboard bow indented. A smooth sea was running at the time. Signals were exchanged, and when it was ascertained that neither steamer had been damaged to the extent of not being able to proceed without assistance, both vessels continued their voyage.

The P. and O. liner, on arrival at Malta, was handed over to the Chief Naval Constructor, who effected the necessary repairs. It is not known whether she will require docking, but this will be ascertained on her return to London.
Most of the passengers were on the promenade deck when the Syria received the shock, but they showed no signs of excitement or panic. Everything was done in an orderly manner as possible. No boats were lowered or life-belts requisitioned. The chief officer hurried down below and held a consultation with the chief engineer and master carpenter, and, after examination, it was found that the steamer had not been seriously damaged. The passengers were promptly assured of this, and the natural anxiety of those on board vanished. Nothing even remotely approaching a panic had taken place, and a noteworthy point was that the native crew behaved admirably.
The chief officer, in conversation with a press representative, spoke very highly of the behaviour of the native crew, who, he said, were perfectly calm at their posts, awaiting orders. Incidentally, he remarked, that he had heard the true story of the behaviour of the lascars crew on the Oceana, who were reported to have behaved in a very cowardly manner. He said that when the accident occurred the engine room crew had come on deck, and, there being no work for them, they had been asked by one of the officers to sit down. This they did, and, opening a Koran, they read or rather chanted portions from it. They were not waiting or showing any signs of cowardice.

SPRAINED ANKLE.

A SPRAINED ANKLE was sustained by a second Indian crew member of the P. and O. steamer Syria, who was injured when the vessel collided with the French steamer Circe in the Mediterranean Sea.

DR. SUN YAT-SEN.

Dr. Sun Yat-sen, who resigned the Presidency of the Chinese Republic in favour of Yuan Shih-kai, has sent a letter to Mrs. Canbio, 140 Harley Street, W., stating:—
"The enthronement of the Manchus does not mean the complete salvation of China. We have an enormous amount of work ahead of us, and it must be accomplished in order that she may be ranked as a great Power among the family of nations."
"I am glad to tell you that we are going to have religious toleration in China, and I am sure that Christianity will flourish under the new regime."

JAPANESE AND MANCHURIA.

Japan has ordered one of her Army Divisions to Pingyang, according to the Japanese papers. The report has neither been confirmed nor denied, and what amount of truth there is in it is difficult to say. As it is well known, Japan has immense barracks at Pingyang, constructed evidently for future contingencies, and thus is fully prepared to deal with any situation that may arise. If the report is true, then apparently she deems the time nearly ripe for action. What special circumstances have arisen which could have induced Japan to take this step? Perhaps the principal cause is to be found in the soldiers' mutiny at Peking and the similar resulting disturbances in other parts of the country. Japan officially certainly did not look with pleasure on the sweeping away of the Manchukuo dynasty, although its fall would have been less objectionable if its place had not been taken by a republic. Japan with a republic on the East coast of the West coast of a decline of the imperial spirit, which she judges necessary for her development. When the news of the mutiny at Peking reached Tokyo, however, it seemed that a republic was not so inevitable as was at first thought. Yuan Shih-kai's position from the Japanese point of view was severely shaken, and it was possible that, after all, the republic of China might prove a dream. But such a reversion of policy could only be accompanied by renewed serious disturbances, which threatened to plunge China in South Manchuria, where Japanese interests are predominant. Again, it appeared not improbable, at one time, that Manchuria would only become a part of the new Republic after a struggle. The danger even now is not entirely past, and will not pass until China obtains a strong hold over Mongolia. This leads naturally to the question of Russian influence in that region. It is generally said that Russia and Japan are now in full accord with their respective interests in North China and that there is full communication between them as to their respective policies. The truth of this assertion, however, was somewhat rudely shaken by the evident perturbation with which the news of the Russian action in Mongolia was received in Tokyo. If there were such full accord, as stated, why did Russia not inform Japan of her readjusted move? It is explained away in Japan as a political move only, by which is apparently meant that Russia does not seek territorial increment, but inasmuch as all annexations, such, for instance, as that of Korea by Japan, are refused by political movements from spheres of influence, through protectorates to absorption, the explanation does not seem very satisfactory. If Russia is to establish a protectorate over Mongolia and ignore the rights of the Chinese Republic, what course must Japan pursue? Japan's only logical course seems to be to take similar action in South Manchuria. Russia has the advantage in Mongolia in that she can ostensibly pose as the champion of the Mongolian Princes who are contending for the independence of their country. In Manchuria, however, the Japanese have the advantage in that they can claim to be the champion of the Chinese Republic, and the Japanese Empire has just closed many attempts were made to obtain from the Government some clear statement as to its policy in China. For the most part these efforts were unavailing. Ministers either reserving their replies to the Greek Embassy, apparently or making those vague statements to which the Japanese language lends itself so admirably. The Government was severely heckled by several members as to its alleged effort to uphold the Manchukuo dynasty, in spite of its declaration as to entire neutrality throughout the struggle; but the answers of Ministers failed to show whether the allegation was true or false. The most definite statement was one made by the Minister of Foreign Affairs, wherein he acknowledged that the outbreak of disturbances in North China had put a different complexion on affairs, and that Japan would be compelled to send troops as required owing to the interests she had at stake, which obliged her to prevent the region being made the basis of operations by the rival belligerent parties. This amounts to a declaration of a protectorate over South Manchuria. No statement was made as to Russia's action in Mongolia at least, not publicly. Whether Japan views Russia's action with alarm, as alleged, or whether she takes it as a part of an already arranged policy is thus uncertain. All that can be stated definitely is that she will not allow South Manchuria to become a prey to any other Power or even allow it to form part of any agreement made with the other Powers as to international policy. It would thus seem that Manchuria will have to remain nominally a portion of the Chinese Republic or run the risk of coming actually under Japanese supervision. The establishment of a separate principality or a combination with Mongolia is not likely to be sanctioned.
